Consultant Psychiatrist and Honorary Senior Lecturer, Kings College University, UK. She is a graduate of Cairo Medical School and fellow of the Royal college of Psychiatrists; London. She holds a Master’s degree in philosophy and a doctorate in psychiatry from London University. She also has two diplomas in moral philosophy and the history of medicine. She practices general adult psychiatry with special interest in issues related to culture and mental health and achieved international reputation through her various publications in this respect: Culture and Weight Consciousness (1997), Eating Disorders & Cultures in Transition (2001) and The Female Body in Mind: the Interface between the Female Body and Mental Health (2007)- all published by Routledge/Taylor & Francis.

She has as well a long-standing interest in Egyptology and has written 40-part illustrated series for children on ancient Egypt in the Arabic language, a collection of psychological / philosophical essays on ancient Egyptian thought entitled Why Did Horus Lose His Eye - A New Reading of Ancient Egyptian Thought and several books on ancient Egypt, ancient civilisations and history of ideas.
Papyrus Inscriptions - A Selection of Ancient Egyptian Poetry.

A translation of selected Egyptian poetry from the Old, Middle and New Kingdoms simplified and presented in such a way to appeal to younger readers as well. The use of poetry here helps as a framework to put ancient Egyptian history in context and show its relevance to our modern times.

Isis and Her Daughters

This book deals with women in ancient Egypt from a new perspective. It uses the lives of Egypt’s famous queens to show how this civilisation celebrated the female principle and enshrined it in its value system which is oriented towards creativity, permanence, balance, harmony and peace.

Imhotep, the Physician who Built the First Pyramid

The book tells the story of Imhotep, the father of ancient Egyptian medicine and architecture. He designed the first stone building in history - Saqarra Pyramid. Readers will be introduced to one of the great figures in the ancient civilisation of the Pharaohs.

The Lotus
A Story of a Cosmic Flower

The book deals with the ‘symbolic journey’ of the lotus flower in the history of art. It begins with the art of ancient Egypt and other ancient civilisations through renaissance and modern art.

Encyclopaedia of the Civilisations of the Ancient World

A wide-ranging overview of the world spanning East to West to study and compare ancient civilisations. The titles are richly illustrated with maps, plates, and drawings. The first volume is a roundup of the ancient civilisations of Egypt, Greece, Iraq, China and Mexico.

The Encyclopaedia of Ideas

The Encyclopaedia of Ideas traces the history of human civilisation through the impact of the most influential ideas of humankind. This three-volume encyclopaedia covers the major philosophers, themes, movements and periods making an indispensable reference for any student or general reader.